

FROM EMMY AWARD-WINNING DOCUMENTARY FILMMAKER

KEITH FAMIE

In this publication, documentary film producer/director Keith Famie shares life lessons with the next leaders of our nation, our children. Having just become a grandfather three years ago, Famie had the wonderful opportunity during the COVID shutdown to stay home and take care of his “little buddy” – his grandson. After enjoying many adventures before the pandemic and adding more during the shutdown, Keith knows that at sixty-years-old, there is more time behind him than there is in front of him. This very realization set Famie on a path to write a book of personal thoughts about the many facets of life and those ideas have grown to create Papa's Rules for Life with hope of guiding and inspiring our youth through the often turbulent and confusing times they are sure to face at some point in their own lives.

Papa's Rules for Life

A grandfather's desire to share words of wisdom with the much younger generation.

To all those future leaders of the world, life is the longest and most remarkable journey you will ever take. You are the captain of your own ship, and although others will join you on your travels, you must always remain in control. You will sail through seas that are stormy and some that are calm, and you will reach distant lands that are frightening and enlightening.

There is only one guarantee: Your adventures will be extraordinary.

It is my wish that your days are mostly sunny and that your waters remain calm, but when they are not, I hope that you will learn to navigate difficult times with pride in yourself and respect for everyone around you.
